They say that they did not hear anything of the escape until early this moraing, and did not hear Murphy and Hulse calling for help when they were looked in the cells. This is regarded as very strange and the conduct of Maher and Flynn will be thoroughly investigated.

It is generally believed that if they were at their posts of duty they would have surely heard something of the struggle between keepers Murphy and Hulse and the two condemned murderers, and surely have heard the keepers' cries for assistance.
